Wesley Chapel Church rich in county history

By FRANCES ASBITT

Wesley Chapel Church is a name unfamiliar to many local people, although the small frame church building still stands on route 644 in Appomattox County.

Driving by, a motorist wouldn't notice because the simple one-room building is hidden from view by a tall growth of pine and brush.

Wesley Chapel Methodist Church, one of the oldest churches in Appomattox was built in 1828. The one acre of land on which the church was built was purchased for five dollars on Aug. 10, 1828 from Thomas Harvey, Sr. and his wife Anna by the trustees of the church according to information gathered by Miss Harriett A. Chilton.

What was it like going to a small one-room church way back then? One Appomattox woman remembers a lot about that little church around 1900.

Mrs. Lillian Hudson, 90 years young, lives in Appomattox County in her home by a lake during the summer months and in Lynchburg with one of her children during the winter months. She joined Wesley Chapel Church at age six.

"All of my family belonged to this church. It was small with 16 pews, eight on one side, eight on the other. The men sat on one side and the woman on the other," said Mrs. Hudson.

"There was a large stove on the men's side of the building. It was placed in a large box of sand. The men who chewed tobacco made it a point to get a seat on the front row so they could spit in the sand box during the service," she added.

"Preaching was held twice a month and Sunday School every Sunday," Miss Lillian remembered. "The deacons took up an offering after preaching and that was all the salary the preacher received. Some people, who didn't have money gave corn, oats, or hay for the preacher's horse," she added.

Mrs. Hudson's father owned a surrey with fringe around the top and she remembers well riding to church in that surrey.

"Five of us could ride comfortably in that surry. I remember we would have to stop on one side of the road in hot weather. Daddy would get out and break a piece of Shoo-fly bush and stick it in the horse's bridle to keep the flies off the horses ears," Miss Lillian said.

"I remember well a large chestnut log resting outside the church door," said Mrs. Hudson with a smile. "Some of the older people would sit on the log and talk after preaching."

"One fat lady who always wore three hoop petticoats was sitting there talking one Sunday after church and a wasp got underneath her skirts. Boy, did she carry on. I think maybe you would call it shaking a leg. I don't remember what became of the wasp. I think maybe it smothered to death! One thing was sure, none of the ladies ever sat on that log again as long as I can remember," she added with a laugh.

After morning church services the young people would meet in the afternoon and play the pump organ and sing hymns.

"Sometimes we were allowed to play croquet. Our mamas would sit on the porch so we didn't dare say an ugly word even when we missed a wicket," Miss Lillian remarked. "We didn't even dare say shucks," she added.

With no radios and television back then, the social life of the community more or less revolved around church activities. A church picnic was something everybody enjoyed.

"We had a church picnic at least once a year. The men would kill squirrels and the ladies would prepare the vegetables. It was all cooked in a large copper kettle. We ate out of tin plates and bowls. Everybody always got a piece a squirrel meat in his or her bowl," she said.

After eating the young people might play Drop the Handkerchief and Steal Partners.

"When protractive meeting started we had an all day meeting on the first day with one sermon in the morning and another in the afternoon. A large picnic dinner on the grounds followed. Lots of chicken, country ham, cakes and pies," Mrs. Hudson said smiling as she remembered.

"We never heard of hamburgers or hot dogs back then but we had a lot of good things to eat, especially cakes," Miss Lillian said.

"I remember Manie getting ready for a church picnic. She bought a block of something black from Len Smith's store in Appomattox. He said it was chocolate and for putting in cakes. Mama cooked a pound cake and put that black stuff in it. At first no one would eat it. She had to eat a slice first to prove to the people at the picnic that it wasn't poison. I remember one old man saying how good it was even if it looked weird," Miss Lillian added.

A lot of ministers served at Wesley Chapel Methodist Church but the first one Miss Lillian remembers was the Rev. H. W. Dunkley who served from 1901 until 1905.

According to Miss Lillian he "rode a horse and led it behind the church building and entered the church by the back steps to the pulpit."

The observance of the Lord's supper stands out in the mind of Mrs. Hudson as she remembers...

There was a table in front of the Bible stand for the Lord's supper. A large glass of wine and a plate of bread cut in blocks was placed on the table.

"Each one of us would take a sip of wine and pass the glass on to the person kneeling beside you and we would take one piece of bread," Mrs. Hudson said.

"Most of the dresses back then were made of cotton. We had at least one Sunday dress and some everyday dresses. We starched the dresses with starch made from flour so they would set out when we walked."

According to Mrs. Hudson, all young ladies wore corsets in that day. It didn't seem to matter how slim a girl happened to be, her waist could always be a little smaller.

"Hats were a part of our church clothing," said Miss Lillian. "Some of them had flowers, some had bunches of grapes, even a bird, all of them had beautiful bows of ribbon. If you were a rich girl you wore a large hat with a feather plume hanging off the back," she added.

"I had a brother who lived in Lynchburg and owned a Maxwell automobile. When he came home to take us to take us to church he brought the women large veils to tie over our hats to keep them from blowing off while we were driving along. "I'm sure his car was the first car to park at Wesley Chapel Methodist Church," Mrs. Hudson said.

"They were the good ole days. Everybody went to church, in buggies, wagons, horseback and if nothing else, they walked. Now everybody has one or two cars and our churches are never full," commented Mrs. Hudson.

"If there are any old members of Wesley Chapel Church living anywhere nearby I would love to hear from them," concluded Lillian Driscoll Hudson.

Miss Lillian and Wesley Chapel Church....both full of memories of by-gone days.

Still Standing

WESLEY CHAPEL CHURCH.....the one-room, simple, frame building still stands. Although it's been many years since a church service was held here, it was once the bustling center of community activity. On and one it stands, a reminder of another time, another way of life. (Photo by Bill Sherrod)

Local students compete in Halloween art contest

The Appomattox County High School Art Club recently sponsored a Halloween Party titled "Arts and Treats"

The Primary School students choosen for their art ability were Dana Goin, Michael Wilkerson, Sean Chambers, Faber Jamerson, Betsy Wilbun, Amanda Evans, Daniel Hatfield, Missy Garrett, Ben Stanton, Robin Walker, Ben Phelps, Ryan Jennings, Kevin Holt, Ashley Lawson, Rondall Washington, Stanley Hamlett, Jeffrey Tyree, Nick Dewitte and Kelly Booth.

Before the party the art room was decorated by Art Club members including a welcome bulletin board with all the students' names on it.

The party opened up with a ghost story told expressively by Cindy Osborne, Art Club president.

During the party the students learned about mixing secondary colors from primary colors that they used in painting a paper mache jack-o-lantern. The jack-o-lantern was in turn used for trick-or-treating. The pumpkins were judged by Art Club members on ability to mix colors, creativity, and neatness.

Missy Garrett was awarded a prize for her pumpkin.

The students also played "Pin the Tail on The Cat" in which Michael Wilkerson came closest and won a prize. Ben Stanton won a prize because he was the child whose birthday was closest to Halloween, Oct. 25.

Near the end of the party refreshments were served, and a story was read by John Ackerman, treasurer.

To top off the evening, individual pictures were taken of the children behind their choice of Halloween props designed by Art Club members.
